At the same time, he insisted, it allows for rebalancing the decision making power in the family in favor of and stressed the need for a redistribution of roles between women and men in the agricultural sector.

Regarding rural women, the U.N. rapporteur demanded a fight against cultural restrictions that affect them. He also called for the incorporation of a gender perspective in all legislation, policies and State programs and incentives that will reward governments who establish and meet objectives in this area.

That prerogative also translates into better physical and mental development of children, since it increases their ability to learn and lead a healthy and productive life, with better health and food results at home, he added.

At the same time, he insisted, it allows for rebalancing the decision making power in the family in favor of women and increasing the productivity of workers in the area of food. De Schutter stressed the obligation of States to invest in easing the burden of domestic work for women and redistributing gender roles as a transformative approach to employment and social protection.

He also called for the incorporation of a gender perspective in all legislation, policies and State programs and incentives that will reward governments who establish and meet objectives in this area.

Regarding rural women, the U.N. rapporteur demanded a fight against cultural restrictions that affect them and stressed the need for a redistribution of roles between women and men in the agricultural sector.

sc/sa/abolis/vc
Modificado el ( lunes, 04 de marzo de 2013 )